

Pricing at Speed

From months to minutes

Faster Pricing is Key to the Customer Experience

While being blissfully unaware of the inner workings of their bank, customers expect quick decisions and competitive pricing, or they will go elsewhere. Failure to meet their expectations around speed and responsiveness jeopardizes customer experience, giving consumers more time to explore competitive alternatives.

Today's banks must embrace a new approach to risk-based pricing in order to keep up with:

- Changing Market Conditions
- Increasing Customer Demands
- Stricter Governance & Compliance Rules
- And More

Older Pricing Methods vs. New Dynamic Pricing Methods

Traditional Pricing

○ Siloed Systems

Operating across multiple disparate systems results in weak efficiency, difficult governance & many challenges when collaborating & moving around information.

○ Outdated Processes

Cumbersome & unwieldy processes are error-prone due to multiple hand-offs, are misaligned & operate too slow for quick market changes.

○ Legacy Technology

Outdated legacy technology requires manual inputs from large pricing committees, presenting complex workflows, weak agility, slow speed & unproductive scalability.

○ Poor agility

○ Slow time-to-market

○ Inflated costs

○ Error-prone

○ Loss of market share
